

Teachers Are Guests At Turkey Dinner In Rankin Home

Miss Patricia Rankin joined with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rankin, Thursday night in entertaining her Willard school teachers at a dinner party. The hosts' home, 2106 North Main street, was setting for the event. Turkey dinner was served at table centered with a white Wedgewood bowl filled with rose-hued pompon chrysanthemums and dahlias. Bouquets of dahlias and jars of honeysuckle provided decorations throughout rooms of the home.

Two of Patricia's Girl Scout friends, the Misses June and Rosemary Blodgett, presented a puppet show, using the dolls, miniature stage and other equipment which they made at Girl Scout Camp Chaparral last summer.

Teachers in the party were Mrs. Nellie M. Smith, Mrs. Ferris H. Scott, Miss Vane Plumb, Mrs. P. H. Budd, Miss Wyllys Anderson, Miss Marian Libby. Completing the group were J. H. Rankin, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rankin and daughter and son, Patricia and Danny Rankin.

Rainbow Club Hostess Honored on Wedding Anniversary

When Rainbow club members held their October meeting this week with Mrs. Lemuel A. Walkinshaw, 610 North Parton street, they had made special plans to surprise their hostess with a gift in observance of her wedding anniversary.

This was a handsome cake served, accompanying a decorated bride's cake, presented by the guests to Mr. and Mrs. Walkinshaw as the luncheon hour drew to a close. At the same time, birthday cakes and gifts were produced for Mrs. A. E. Kohler and Mrs. Lawrence Warner, recent celebrants of birthday anniversaries.

Mrs. Walkinshaw had used special decorations throughout her home, combining feathery goldenrod with yellow dahlias in big black pottery bowls. These gave a Halloween trend to the decorations, which received further emphasis in luncheon table appointments and favors. Worthy of special comment were the salads which appeared as jolly little Halloween faces, through the clever handwork of the hostess.

Afternoon hours were devoted to quining friendship pillow tops by Rainbow club members, Mrs. Roy Kelchner, Mrs. A. E. Kohler, Mrs. Joe Thompson, Santa Ana; Mrs. Lawrence Warner, Covina; Mrs. Will Hatch, Arcadia; Mrs. Mary Adamson and Mrs. Scott Torrens, Tustin, the hostess, Mrs. Walkinshaw, and her mother, Mrs. L. A. Downie, a special guest of the day.

China doll favors at each place were surrounded by orange and black candles tied in amber cellophane to match the amber table service. Angel food cake, chocolate and ice cream were served.

Gloria Mae was showered with gifts from her young friends.

Sorority Alumnae Plan County Organization

With 29 members of Kappa Delta, national college sorority, known to be living in Orange county, some of that number have taken steps to organize an Orange County Kappa Delta Alumnae association and apply for a charter.

A group of eight met Thursday evening in the home of Mrs. Albert Williams, 408 West Brookdale, Fullerton, elected officers, set a time for meeting, and made first plans for organization and application for a charter. Only five members are needed for the charter, but it is believed there will be at least 15 of the alumnae who will join.

Mrs. Elmer Guy of Brea was elected president; Mrs. Reese W. Norton of Fullerton, vice-president; Mrs. Williams, secretary; and Miss Sally Culp of Brea, treasurer. Others present were Mrs. G. W. Bassett of Santa Ana, Mrs. D. W. Goodwin of Brea and Mrs. Henry Hodges of Anaheim. Santa Ana alumnae who have signified their intention of joining include Mrs. M. E. Meeks and Miss Mabel Pruitt.

Many of the members are graduates of active chapters at U. S. C. and U. C. L. A. but others come from colleges in all parts of the country.

It was decided to undertake one philanthropic project each year in accordance with requirements set down by the national organization for maintenance of a chartered alumnae chapter. The group agreed to make the first project, completion of a quilt to be used in the ward at the children's hospital in Richmond, Va., maintained by the sorority. The chapter will also entertain girls in the county who plan to attend colleges which have Kappa Delta chapters, therefore aiding the college chapters in rushing.

It was decided to hold meetings on the third Tuesday of each month. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Goodwin, 331 South Madrona, Brea.

Garden Tour Succeeds Ebells Gardeners' Luncheon

Illustrating his talk on fall planting with many specimens of new and rare shrubs, John Wilcox of Costa Mesa addressed approximately 50 members of Ebells Garden section at their meeting Friday afternoon in the clubhouse peacock room.

Following the program the group was privileged to tour the gardens and conservatories of the Ernest Watson home in Tustin, where a blooming orchid received major attention.

Mrs. J. E. Paul, county garden chairman, read messages from the county and state federations, during a brief business session. Mesdames R. C. Mixer, Ernest Watson, O. S. Catland and Norris Hill-ton were introduced as new members.

Luncheon was served at tables attractively decorated in Halloween motif by a hostess committee composed of Mesdames W. W. Kays, M. C. Williams, J. E. Liebig, J. L. McBride, Harold Finley, J. A. Kirkwood and Clyde Bach.

Reciprocity Luncheon Given By DI Chapter P. E. O.

In line with plans of the nine P. E. O. chapters of Orange county, to stage a general reciprocity luncheon twice a year in addition to monthly board meetings, was the interesting occasion yesterday when Chapter DI of this city, was hostess group in Ebells clubhouse.

Mrs. C. C. Fuller, chapter president, and her members received the guests, later turning the business meeting over to Mrs. Mabel Scott Zinn of Fullerton, reciprocity president.

In addition to business matters pertaining strictly to P. E. O. chapters, was the program planned by the hostess group and presented in connection with the luncheon hour. Tables were made inviting by the use of deep red pompon dahlias and an appetizing menu was served by Ebells Sixth House-hold Economics section.

Mrs. Maurice Enderle was in charge of the musical program and introduced as guest artist, Mrs. W. O. Hart, of Orange, contralto soloist. Mrs. Hart, in a black ensemble costume with which she wore white gardenias, was so charming in appearance that her audience was fully prepared to enjoy the rich qualities of her voice, which has been trained and developed under Earl Fraser of this city. She sang, to Mr. Fraser's accompaniment, "Stille Wie die Nacht" (Bohm), "The Island" (Eric Zorba), "Home-ings" (Teresa del Rio), and as an encore number, "Clouds."

It was Mrs. John A. Tasmanian's privilege to present as speaker, Calvin C. Flint, dean of men at Santa Ana Junior college. The experiences which he shared with Mrs. Flint (Rose Marie Smith) in Russia last summer, when they departed from the proscribed tourist lines of travel and saw communities and sections not usually available to tourists, gave him material for a fascinating talk.

There were approximately 70 women present to enjoy the occasion, representing two P. E. O. chapters in Fullerton, two in Orange, one each in Anaheim and Huntington Beach, and three in Santa Ana, Chapters AB, GJ and the hostess group, DI.

Cementing bonds between two groups of Masonic mothers, those whose sons form Santa Ana chapter De Molay, and those whose daughters are allied with Job's Daughters, was a most enjoyable luncheon staged yesterday in Masonic temple.

Smilax was wreathed with sprays of cotoneaster gleaming with scarlet jewels of berries, in decorating the linen spread tables, while a variety of autumn flowers provided colorful background. Luncheon was followed by a social afternoon whose chief entertainment feature was provided by Lorene Croddy Graves and her pupils.

A song by Harvey Riggie, reading by Bobbie Corey, piano solo by Marian Munsel, reading by Betty Lou Perriman, and songs by Donald Krueger, were features of this pleasant interval.

Mothers of the two closely related groups were Mesdames Claude McFarren, E. U. Farmer, Herbert Birt, Floyd V. Nelson, Charles N. Archer, Fred H. Pope, Plummer Bruns, Cotton Mather, C. W. Rowland, R. Present were the hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Shields, Mr. and Mrs. James C. Conrad and children, Doris Jean and James Wilber; Miss Rosalind Almond and Francis Conrad.

Unusual Program Adds Interest to Musical Arts Meeting

Various professional musicians of the community who have not yet identified themselves with the Musical Arts club, joined with other friends in enjoyment of the musicale which the club was privileged to hold last night in the Visel-Haughton studios, 425 West First street.

It was a delightful hospitality which club members extended, and in keeping were the artistically arranged flowers which served as a background to the evening's social events. Mrs. W. B. Snow, president, and her various chairmen, including Mary Batten Steffenson, program and Cecile Fross Wilfitts, social, were congratulated upon the success of all plans.

There was an interesting variety in the program, which opened with four numbers, by the Lyric String trio, the Misses Anna May Archer, Beatrice Granas and Audrey Granas. Their numbers were "Menuetto" by Mozart; "Allegretto" by Beethoven; "Liebesgarten," Schumann, and "Scherzo," Mendelssohn.

Beulah Buck-Fogleman, a cousin of Mrs. Charles G. Nalle now residing here from Hollywood, Fla., gave several impromptu readings, "I've Just Got Home" (Carrie Jacobs Bond); "An Old Man's Story" a clever monologue, and "The Return Ticket," a Swedish story. Mrs. Fogleman is an accomplished reader who for a number of years traveled with her own company from the Redpath Chautauqua bureau in the east.

Song features were provided by Arras Christie Bugge, baritone soloist, accompanied by Miss Leonora Tompkins. He sang "Who is Sylvia?" (Schubert); "Vision Fugitive" (Massenet); "You I Love" (Grieg) and "Passing By" (Furcell). The program closed with piano numbers by Clarence Gustlin who played "Chorale" (Bach-Hess) and Chopin's "Waltz in A flat."

Mrs. Wilfitts and her social committee, Miss Ruth Armstrong and Holly Lash Visel, had arranged one of the big rooms most attractively as a setting for the social hour when refreshments were served. The tea table was centered with brilliant fruits and nuts nestled in autumn leaves, and was lighted by tall orange tapers. Cakes laid in the vivid orange tones, and mints in the same color, were served with tea poured by Mrs. Visel and Miss Armstrong.

YORBA LINDA, Oct. 19.—A women's night program will be observed at Masonic temple Thursday, with Masons entertaining with a program. Cards will occupy part of the evening. Refreshments will be served.

TUSTIN CHOR WILL PRESENT ABBEY PROGRAM

The Musical Memory Hour program to be given at Melrose Abbey at 3 p. m. tomorrow, will be under the direction of Mrs. Harry L. Hanson, who will present the choir of the Advent Christian church, of Tustin.

Mrs. Hanson has chosen as her theme for this program "Favorite Hymns of Famous 'Evangelists'" and will be assisted in their presentation by the Rev. Howard F. Nason. Numbers by the choir will be "Awakening Chorus," "Grace," "For Me" and "Just As You Are" which were used extensively by Evangelists Charles H. Gabriel, Evangeline Booth and John Brown respectively.

A ladies chorus will sing one of Fanny Crosby's favorite hymns "Saved by Grace." "The Ninety and Nine" written by Ira Sankey and greatly admired by all followers of Moody and Sankey will be a special featured solo. Two duets have been arranged presenting "Peace" by V. P. Brock and a number used by Torrey and Alexander and "Just Outside the Door" by B. D. Ackley, a favorite of Homer Rodheaver.

Numbers to be sung by the chorus will be "I Need Jesus" (Charles Gabriel) a favorite of Billy Sunday; "Speak My Lord" used by George Bernard; "Let the Beauty of Jesus" (Tom Jones) much used by Stanley Jones in his work and "Have Thine Own Way" (Geo. C. Stebbins) a favorite of the Oxford Movement. A quartet will present one number "Light at Eventide" (A. E. Bloom) one of Ella Jones' favorites.

The closing number will present one of O. R. Jenks' outstanding hymns written by H. K. Carter. Mrs. Harry L. Hanson will also act as accompanist on the Cathedral organ playing the prelude "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name" universally connected with the Evangelistic work of T. D. Talmadge.

Those composing the choir are: Sopranos: Laura Marks, Lorene Hanson, Enid Wilson, Hazel Elton, Vivian Harper, Acilia Bowden, Annette Howell, Harlett Howell. Altos: Francis Harper, Carrie Elton, Lulu Matney, Helen Harper, Wanda Espey, Bertha Taylor. Tenors: Harry Hanson, Carl Fromhold, Idus Harper. Basses: Clair Hanson, Louis Hanson, Earl Shoemaker.

The general public is invited. Melrose Abbey is located on 101 Highway between Santa Ana and Anaheim.

Unitarian Church Service Presents Searching Queries

Does the fear of Hell make people behave? What is the origin of these beliefs and what purpose do they serve? Could society get along just as well without them? What would take their place as a restraint on conduct and comfort in affliction? Are those critics right who say religion is an opiate? Does belief in an after life induce us to endure what we ought to correct? If we stopped expecting justice to be meted out after death, would we be more apt to insist it be given before death? Would we be more vengeful? Less patient?

Such are the questions that will be considered at the Unitarian church tomorrow when the minister, the Rev. Julia N. Budlong, considers the second of the four

BEE MAN TO SPEAK AT M. E. CHURCH

Man has kept bees since before King Tut. In all that time man has not been able to teach the bee anything. But man has learned much from the bees, according to H. W. Johnson, who will lecture on bees tomorrow at the evening church service in the First M. E. church.

Some of the things man has learned about bees, includes: A colony of bees can contain 50,000 individual bees.

The queen may lay 1500 eggs per day.

A colony may gather as much as 30 pounds of honey in one day, and as much as 600 pounds in one season.

Bees may fly as far as nine miles from home. Their wing-beat is 10,000 per minute.

The bee is practically blind, and communicates by odors.

Johnson, who has been a bee-keeper for 13 years, will accompany his lecture about these most interesting insects with illustrations.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS—By JOHN HIX

Sulphur, a solid at ordinary temperatures, melts at from 112 to 119 degrees, Centigrade, into a clear yellow fluid. If, however, this molten sulphur is still further heated at about 250 degrees it thickens again, becoming dark and almost solid. Application of more heat turns it clear and limpid again at 300 degrees. Sulphur, then, first melts, then solidifies, then melts again as more heat is applied. At 443 degrees it boils, forming a yellow vapor.

Robert Thomas, mystery man of the Windham County Jail, Brooklyn, Conn., was sentenced to a short jail term there ten years ago on a charge of vagrancy. Well liked, useful, and apparently quite contented, he made arrangements to stay on after his term was up, living in the jail and working there for his meals, clothes, and a small monthly allowance.

Although he never talked of his past or his family, occasional slips in his conversations led officers to believe that he came from a good family, and was a man of fair education. The name he gave was probably fictitious. Just why a man would so willingly call a county jail his home for ten years, no one could say. The mystery now is a closed one, for not long ago Robert Thomas died.

THE TINYMITES

Story by HAL COCHRAN Pictures by GEORGE SCARBO

The County Fair judge said, "Well, now I'll pin this ribbon on somehow, to indicate this funny beast has captured a first prize." Said Duncy, "Pin it any place. Just stick it on the old cow's face. You couldn't hurt that cloth beast, if you stuck it in the eyes."

The judge just laughed and said, "Here goes. I'll stick it on the bossy nose, and then I hope that we can get the cow to prance around."

The pinning, then, was promptly done. "Oh, ouch!" yelled Windy, just in fun. Of course it didn't hurt him. He was inside, safe and sound.

Then Coppy whispered from the rear, "Before we scramble out of here, let's give the Tinymites a show, and make them laugh in glee."

"I'll run around and cry out, moo! 'Twill be a funny thing to do. Remember, now, you'll spoil it all, if you don't follow me."

"Okay," said Windy, "I can last, unless you start to run too fast. Let's do a funny little dance. That ought to bring a roar."

The Tinymites watched them for a while and then wee Goldy, with a smile, exclaimed, "Oh, that was very funny. Kindly dance some more."

By this time Windy felt that he had had enough. He said, "Oh, gee, it's getting hot inside this skin. I need a bit of air."

And then he had a happy hunch that he felt sure would thrill the bunch. Instead, however, when 'twas pulled, it gave them all a scare.

"Oh, look," yelled Dotty. "That

STORIES IN STAMPS

By I. S. Klein

SOME 3000 years ago, so Japanese legend goes, the earth trembled and overnight there rose the great Mount Fuji, a torch of fire flaming high above it. Two hundred years ago came the last eruption of this imposing volcano.

The great cone-shaped mountain rises 12,395 feet above sea level. For a short time during summer thousands of worshipers from all over Japan come and climb its slope, stopping at each of 10 stations on the way, where priests brand their long white staffs of new wood to mark their progress. Most of the pilgrims are poor, and come as the fortunate representatives of their districts whose inhabitants have contributed to their expenses. After the trip, they bring back the blessings of the priests and the mark of their pilgrimage on their wooden staffs.

The stamp shown here illustrates this sacred mountain. It was issued in 1922. Another stamp showing Fujiyama was printed in 1926.

WORLD'S "PUBLIC ENEMY NO. 1"

It is difficult for one to consider the struggle in Ethiopia in any other light than an expedition of pillage and murder, by a powerful nation, against a defenseless people.

The best any critic has suggested that it is possible for the Ethiopians to do, is that they may scatter into the hills and mountain fastnesses and make it impossible for mass formations of troops to destroy them in their entirety.

But, up to that point, we can see nothing in it much more than wholesale murder. The groups, the villages, with their mud and straw huts, can furnish no opposition and there is really little, if any, danger to the invader.

They are in little more danger than they would be if they had driven rabbits into a close corral and were killing them with clubs.

The nations are viewing it in rather a nonchalant manner.

Of course they have passed resolutions in the League of Nations. They have agreed on economic sanctions that may be put into execution "some Sunday next week."

England has blustered about it and almost appeared in earnest at times. But, after all, the murder continues.

Why is it that we can dub Al Capone as "Public Enemy No. 1," and incarcerate him at Alcatraz and the world has no means of curbing a madman who is upsetting the peace balance of the nations?

Why can't the world restrain him from attacking, with hardly any provocation, a half-civilized race of backward people and literally slaughtering them, according to their own statement, by the thousands?

Must we forever go on, in our international affairs, in this manner?

If a man kills another, the hangman's noose awaits him or life imprisonment. If on the other hand, he goes out and kills thousands of just as helpless victims, we have great debates in international assemblies and diplomatic exchanges, but withal, a continuance of the slaughter.

Do England and France imagine that the United States will be won to a League of Nations with such an exhibition of savage cruelty permitted, at least by delay and debate?

While it is true that Italy probably will not gain much from it, world opinion is forming and she will finally lose, but this will not restore the lives of men, women and children, nor make whole again the maimed bodies of these miserable people.

There has never been a war, where there was such dependence placed upon nature for a defense, as there is in Abyssinia. If the Abyssinians are not annihilated, up to the extent at least that Italy desires them to be, it will be because the Creator of the universe afforded them some natural protection.

We read today that they may make a mass attack. In this, it seems they cannot help but lose. They should read the story of Braddock's defeat, the reasons for it and how Washington and his few Continentals protected Braddock's troops from complete destruction.

ALBERTA'S SOCIAL CREDIT SYSTEM

Ever since Mr. Aberhart, leader of the Social credit party in Alberta, province of Canada, succeeded in capturing about 140 seats out of a possible 151 in the legislature of that province, we have been anxious to discover what it was all about.

Mr. Aberhart promised every man and woman in Alberta $25.00 of credit money at the beginning of every month, with children entitled to lesser amounts.

Major Douglas, who is the originator of this social theory, says that an amount of $25.00 for every one is "quite impractical" but does contend that Alberta can put the doctrine into practice.

This depression, according to social credit adherents, is due to the fact that people produce more than they consume. The problem is therefore one of distributing the surplus, in order that everybody may continue to be employed.

This surplus is to be distributed by the government issuing paper money or coupons in an amount equal in value to this surplus. By doling out these coupons or money orders to all alike, whatever surplus of goods has been produced and has not been bought or consumed would be distributed by use of coupon money. With no surplus on hand, nobody would need to be idle.

The price at which the undistributed surplus is to be sold for coupon money is said to be the crux of the whole scheme. Major Douglas sets it forth in the following words:

"The just price of an article, which is the price at which it can be effectively distributed in the community producing it, bears the same ratio to the cost of production that the total consumption and depreciation of the community bears to the total production."

Unless the old economic machinery begins to function once more and absorb the unemployed, we will hear a lot more about "credit schemes" and economic systems designed to place in the hands of the consumer the things he needs, which undoubtedly can be produced in abundance.

RIFT IN A. F. OF L.

The annual meeting of the American Federation of Labor at Atlantic City has not been as harmonious as former meetings. The organization has not been able to keep down the growing discontent, among many of the component unions, concerning the time-worn policies no longer applicable to present-day economic conditions.

The alliance of labor with Mark Hanna's civic federation has been broken by the forced resignation of Matthew Woll, one of the vice presidents of the A. F. of L., as head of the former organization. It has always seemed an anomalous alliance.

A representative of labor "sleeping in the same economic bed" with Ralph Easley, the secretary of the Civic Federation, would appear to be very strange were it not that Matthew Woll and Ralph Easley have so many conservative attitudes in common. They both have been fiery "red baiters," smelling communism on every unwashed hand and finding every liberal college professor to be in the pay of Moscow.

The time came when Mr. Woll had to make his choice of masters. He could not be the servant of both. He evidently has been forced to the conclusion that he had better stick to the labor side.

Yet the question will persist in many minds in his organization how deep and genuine his devotion to labor is. There is very little, either in his utterances or activities, since he became the head of the Civic federation, that indicates any great achievement in bringing "big business" closer to the A. F. of L. point of view on the relationship of the two.

But the more significant incident in the meeting at Atlantic City was the struggle between those who still hold to the outworn craft union principle, and those who believe that industrial unionism alone can cope with great organizations of industrial capital.

The existence of a score of unions, within one industry, often in conflict with each other, has made for futility for the workers as well as for confusion among them. The jurisdictional disputes between unions in the same industry has made it impossible for employers to deal with workers in times of strife.

It is very significant, in an organization so closely controlled at the head, that the advocates of industrial unionism were able to muster 10,924, out of 28,025 cast, for the radical change proposed in union organization. The old-timers cannot hold out many years longer against the trend.

The one thing that holds them in control is the spirit of Samuel Gompers. The founder of the federation, like the founding fathers of the United States constitution, is still clothed with a final authority over the future which neither he nor they would claim for themselves amid the changes of a growing society.

Sharing the Burden
New York Times

Mr. Frank C. Walker, director of the National Emergency Council, is close enough to the inner councils of the Roosevelt Administration to warrant special interest in his remarks, made in the course of an address this week, on the chief problem with which the Administration is confronted. This is the increasingly complex and costly business of relief. Mr. Walker thinks that the time has come, and that enough progress has been made in the direction of industrial recovery, to begin to turn the relief burden back to the State and local governments. It is not the proper function of a national Administration, he believes, and "not good governmental philosophy, to have our Federal Government reaching out into the States, counties, cities and towns to manage and care for such intimate affairs."

Of the truth of this observation there can be little doubt. The responsibilities which the Federal Government has accepted in such matters since 1933 have involved it on a steadily increasing scale in the business of deciding questions which are essentially local in character, and of financing "projects" for which local funds ought properly to be raised. Nor can there be any question that, while some States and localities have done their part, others have failed consistently to accept a fair share of the burden. Proof of this is the fact that in twenty-seven States so little was contributed to relief last year by State and local governments that the Federal Government was forced to foot more than four-fifths of the bill.

Common sense and a due regard for the risk which confront the national Treasury argue that the relief question be dealt with differently in the next budget. Various alternatives are possible. One would consist of an offer on the part of the National Government to match, dollar for dollar, whatever funds are raised locally for relief, leaving to local administrators and to local sentiment the question of deciding how these funds could be spent locally to best advantage. No doubt certain members of Congress representing States and districts which have been delinquent in relief work would be averse to this arrangement. But it is high time to reverse the present tendency toward centralized authority, and Mr. Walker's remarks suggest that the Administration is increasingly aware of it.

Profits And Wages
New York Times

Early last Summer the Research and Planning Division of the NRA, under the direction of Leon Henderson, published a report intended to show that labor had suffered much more comparatively from the depression than capital. The Department of Commerce figures published in mid-August showed such a contention to be without substance. Total labor income for 1929, for example, was 65 per cent of total national income; in 1934 it was 67.5 per cent. Property income, on the other hand, fell from 14.8 per cent of the total in 1929 to 14.4 per cent in 1934.

Returning to this general subject in The Annalist, Simon N. Whitney takes up the frequent assertion of some radicals that profits increased by a greater percentage in 1934 over 1933 than payrolls did. This is true. But those who are shocked by the greater percentage increase in profits than payrolls which characterizes business revivals are deceived because their attention is directed only to a small part of the whole situation. Profits, as Mr. Whitney points out, fluctuate above and below zero, while payrolls are always positive; the former, therefore, undergo greater percentage swings. Before contrasting their changes from one year to the next, some account must be taken of the known difference in the ordinary amplitude of their fluctuations.

When this is done it is found not merely that profits in 1934 were still much lower compared with 1929 than payrolls were, but that they had retraced a smaller percentage of the decline since 1925 than payrolls had. A comparison of the compilation by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York of profits of 163 industrial and mercantile corporations, and the Bureau of Labor Statistics index of payrolls, gives the following result:

	Profits	Payrolls
Index, 1925	100.0	100.0
Index, 1933	30.2	48.2
Index, 1934	44.9	61.6
Increase in 1934 over 1933	48.7%	27.6%
Loss since 1925 recovered in
1934	21.1%	25.7%

SOMETHING TO WORRY ABOUT
(After reading what a troubled French astronomer has been saying against sun-spots.)

Beware, dearest friends, of the sun-spots.
As the world you go wandering through,
They may turn all your ten-spots to one-spots
And raise the blue dickens with you.
If you're troubled, or weary or ailing,
And lagging behind in the game,
And your efforts are quite unavailing,
Those confounded spots are to blame.
All over the cosmos they rapidly run
In quest of their place in the sun.

The sun-spots take charge of the weather;
They are borne on the howling typhoon.
Which rages for fortnights together.
They are thought to make marks on the moon.
Wild cyclones are all of their breeding.
They are busy by day and by night.
You'd better not start your Fall wedding
If you find there's a sun-spot in sight.
Which there usually is, everywhere o'er the girth
Of this rapidly rotating earth.

We all have been placidly dwelling
On the face of this beautiful sphere.
Which some masterful force is propelling
For year after swift flying year.
And since we must take it or leave it,
We might just as well carry on.
Believe it, or don't you believe it,
Till our last hope forever is gone.
As for sun-spots, for years you have probably known
One must take them or let them alone.

Thoughts On Modern Life

BY GLENN FRANK

HURDLES FOR THE PLANNERS

Sooner or later we must come to something approaching a national agreement on the role and limitations of planning.

Social planning on a national scale was hailed as a new gospel by depression-harassed Americans in 1933.

There was a contagious feel of mastery as we watched Mr. Roosevelt take a whole nation in his hands to shape it to the pattern of what he deemed the desire of the people.

As weeks have merged into months one plan after another has found insurmountable hurdles across the path of the planners.

One of the President's most vigorous critics, an erstwhile colleague, recently stated that, in his judgment, the President "suffers not only from the malady of excessive planning—as in the NRA and AAA examples—but from a combination of too much planning in the basic concept of the scheme and too little planning in its execution."

This, I think, is sound criticism. When men face the intolerable they are always tempted to try the impossible.

The blunt truth is that, short of a complete and iron-fisted dictatorship, it is impossible to "plan" the total life of the United States.

The job is too big and too complicated.

And nobody knows enough to do it wisely.

There was the germ of a sound and statesmanlike idea in the NRA, had it been applied only to the half dozen or more major industries that give the key to the economic life of the nation. But the scheme was bound to fail when it covered too much territory, over-elaborated its regulations, and trusted too much to the idea and too little to sounder detailed planning in execution.

The alternative to an utterly impractical and visionary planning is not do-nothingism.

We must limit the scope of planning to dimensions that are manageable. We must not try to do the impossible. And what we do must rest upon more than carefully devised methods of execution.

DRIFTING CHILDREN

The first demand a child makes after his immediate primary needs have been met is for something to do. The child of tender years and the adolescent are happy only when they are busy at some absorbing occupation.

Much of the naughtiness that bothers young mothers could be prevented by giving the naughty child something to do. Set him on a rug in his own particular corner daily, with a basket containing bits of colored cloth and paper, a rattle, a ball, a toy animal, and a box with a lid that can be taken off and put on again and again. Teach him to amuse himself for a period daily, gradually, lengthening the time so that when he is an independent child he can get along without asking his mother for something to do.

Give each child, right from the beginning, something useful to do, letting him hold the soap or the washrag during his bath, if he can do no more. As he grows, his duties grow in importance and complexity. This is what makes him feel wanted, a feeling that is necessary to his mental and physical health.

The great difficulty about all this is that the home offers so little real work that a child can do these days, unless he lives on a farm, or a near farm. But there is always something that a child can do to help himself and others, and so feel himself a partner in the life of the family.

In the larger towns and cities the opportunities are fewer. The homes are small and crowded. Children's usefulness is cut down to the vanishing point. School has taken over much that used to be taught in the homes. Again the difficulty arises. The schools are crowded, the teachers are over-worked. There is no room, no material, no free teacher to offer opportunity for active useful work such as children used to do as home chores. Mending chairs, painting odd bits, sorting odds and ends, cleaning house and yards and outbuildings. All that went out when the factory was opened, the new electric machinery set up. Living habits have changed. But the basic need for usefulness is unchanging.

Inasmuch as schools have had to take over the duties of the home they should have provided activities that would help the children to be useful. These bits of equipment that could be carried to the school with safety and economy ought to have been placed there and children taught to use them. Electric toasters, irons, vacuum cleaners, washers, kitchen appliances, should be demonstrated, and the children, boys and girls alike, taught how to use them. They should be taught the principles on which they work.

The science shops should be in every school. Here the basic principles of the machinery of today should be demonstrated and taught, and the pupils taken to see the machines at work until they are thoroughly acquainted with them. This must be done if the children are to have their hunger for something to do satisfied. With nothing to do they drift aimlessly about and get into trouble. Such waste of Youth is unthinkable.

Of course it will cost money, but we spend a lot of money for less worthy causes.
